The smell thing is weird though.

Also my hands are freezing—as in literally cold to the touch. Also weird.

Trying to figure out when, I might have been exposed if I'm positive.

We went to the protest on June 2nd. Three weeks ago, so unlikely.

We went to Kroger on June 8th. Possible.

We went to Walgreens on June 18th. That seems too recent but is possible.

(Masked all three times.)

perspective not just measured against their competition in a given moment. The idea that one can't critically evaluate Biden or his campaign because the bar Trump sets is low is bizarre, to say the least.

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · 10m

A reporter should state the reason for dismissing the candidate ahead by 10 points as flawed. This is pretty basic. Particularly if said reporter works at an outlet that gets pretty worked up about objectivity.

2 15

(((YousefMunayyer))) @YousefMunayyer · 4m

I'm sure @maggieNYT is more than capable or articulating her perspective on that if she wants to. I don't see it as particularly controversial. Also, the idea that a candidate or campaign with a lead can't be flawed is really strange.

Haberman just casually asserts that Biden is a running a flawed campaign...as if it's a matter of recognized fact, an axiom. Zero evidence. Zero substantiation. What she did there isn't journalism.

Cooper should have pressed her to substantiate that flawed campaign statement.

Joe Biden has won the Dem nomination earlier than anyone expected, united the Dem party, assembled a top flight campaign, currently beating an incumbent president by about 10 points in polls. But is simply dismissed as flawed With No Explanation Given. Pretty ridiculous.

They are sly and slippery. Surely chokeholds have been "studied" before. I mean, in my state there are very specific levels of threat matched to the level of police response. It's a no-brainer that the cops morphing into an indiscriminate gang is not at any level.

Biden has been doing very well with voters who didn't like Trump or Hillary. Usually the open vote breaks for the challenger. As you know the hardest step is getting Trump supporter to stop supporting Trump. Once they've stopped they are Far More Open to the alternative.

It's absolutely amazing that the Trump team thinks they have been "tough" on China. The reality is that Trump's approach to China has been uniquely ineffective and counterproductive, and only serves Trump's personal interests. Let's review...

Trump's trade war has hurt American workers without getting China to make necessary structural changes to its economy. Trump's abandoning of US leadership, derision of US allies, and assault on multilateral institutions has hurt America's ability to counter worrying CCP actions.

What has Trump done with China? He asked Xi Jinping twice to help Trump win re-election - once by asking Xi to investigate Biden and again by asking for the trade "deal" to consist of Chinese purchases of agricultural goods from key Trump political constituencies.

U.S. set a record for new COVID cases today: 38,672.
The previous record was 36,001 two months ago.
This didn't have to happen--other countries have shown that infections could be brought to a halt, and re-opening could proceed safely.

Population density would matter. Not population. Is Europe less dense than the US? I don't think so. And @chrislhayes is right. Europe is simply not seeing a second surge. The idea this isn't policy based is frankly bizarre

There's no doubt that Trump hasn't helped, but I would be cautious in assuming that the covid situation in the US is solely a result of his policies. Additionally, as Nate is observing, just because things are fine now in Europe doesn't mean that they will remain so!

Look at the daily data across Europe. Their countries as a rule have an upside down V. We do not. Like this is just not factually in dispute.

The fact that they had a downward slope and we did not is - in itself - a good thing. We don't know the future. We do know the past. Their virus response has been more effective up through today.

Is it too much to ask people to recognize that Biden has held press briefings and the media hasn't covered them? Certainly not live. The right place to send this complaint is to CNN and MSNBC.

> Anil Dash @anildash
> It is rank incompetence on the part of @JoeBiden & his campaign that they aren't having daily COVID briefings with reliable information & trustworthy sources about how people can organize to drive local responses and help those in need. Leaders need to lead, period.

I support universal health care using Germany's health care system as the model. It's called Medicare Extra. I don't know why you are under the impression that I don't support universal health care. Other than twitter brain washing.

Lul$ @sicktransitw · 1h
Universal coverage isn't the same as Medicare For All. You're still allowing private insurance companies to exist, when there's no need for them. They're just middle-men that make tremendous profits at our expense. But of course, Neera is rich so it doesn't matter to her.

People working or living in care homes can be tested even if they don't have symptoms.

- What are coronavirus symptoms?

How does the test work?

The test finds out if you currently have the virus.

I gotta say, going to bat for a for-profit healthcare system during a pandemic AND economic downturn is pretty astounding.

Actually I'm a fan of Germany's universal health care system which has private, but not-for-profit insurance, highly regulated. Maybe check it out instead of using strawman arguments.The health system isn't the reason, but Germany has handled the virus much better than US or UK.

There's a very big climate difference between Sicily and Milan, though not the same AC issue. My point is that the other big factor is policy China and Italy most notably instituted fairly uniform national policy, after failing at regionally focused policies.

Nate Silver @NateSilver538 · 4h

I don't know that one can assume that Europe, especially the parts of Europe that didn't get hit badly before, is necessarily past its problems. That aside, it does seem that large, populous countries (Brazil, Russia, India, USA) have struggled more than small/medium-sized ones.

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · 4h

Population density would matter. Not population. Is Europe less dense than the US? I don't think so. And @chrislhayes is right. Europe is simply not seeing a second surge. The idea this isn't policy based is frankly bizarre

Chris Fowler @cfowler1850 · 4h

Neera what more evidence do we need that there are serious problems in society right now that aren't solved by more rules. No one believes anyone and the Presidents followers are literally doing the opposite of what policy professionals tell them. How do you solve for lunacy?

Actually, rules have a way of setting behavior. It's just helpful when all leaders follow the rules. That part is broken in the US

Is it too much to ask people to recognize that Biden has held press briefings and the media hasn't covered them? Certainly not live. The right place to send this complaint is to CNN and MSNBC.

> Anil Dash @anildash
> It is rank incompetence on the part of @JoeBiden & his campaign that they aren't having daily COVID briefings with reliable information & trustworthy sources about how people can organize to drive local responses and help those in need. Leaders need to lead, period.

Maybe the thing to be most optimistic about in America right now. Trump tried to inflame whites against people of color. It is backfiring.

> Trump over Mrs. Clinton in 2016 by 2.5 percentage points, slightly better for Mr. Trump than the actual result of the six states, offering a level of validity to the survey's findings. Mr. Biden also has a 17-point lead among registered voters who did not vote in the 2016 race.

> Mr. Trump's once-decisive advantage among white voters has all but vanished, despite national attention to the kind of racial issues that many analysts believed propelled his strength among white voters in the first place. If attitudes about race were vital to Mr. Trump's appeal with white voters, then a foundation of his strength has been badly shaken.

Talk to the 3rd party voters who threw the election to Trump in PA, WI & MI where Hillary lost by a mere half percent and 77k votes while 3rd party votes were 800k. Remind them Trump's SCOTUS appointees will be there for 30yrs at least.

You know which group of voters had the most singular impact on the primary? Black voters in South Carolina. Maybe respect their choice. They have a lot more on the line than say those living in other countries. Their choice seems to be the right one for the moment we are in.

Also interesting that the movement in the electorate is all with white voters, no erosion of Trump's standing with the minority of non-white voters who liked him as of last year.

Biden's standing in battleground states represents a major shift in support from 2016 with nearly every group of voters.

Biggest impact, post-initial outbreak, Trump may have on virus is allowing/encouraging masks to be one more tribal signifier in American life.

If he echoed his own CDC, a number of Republican governors today would have ample cover to require mandatory masking.

NEW: Gwen Carr, mother of Eric Garner; Samaria Rice, mother of Tamir Rice; and John Crawford, Jr., father of John Crawford III, released statement supporting the George Floyd #JusticeInPolicing Act, legislation to hold police accountable + change the culture of law enforcement.

U.S. House Committee on THE JUDICIARY
CHAIRMAN JERROLD NADLER

Ahead of House Vote, Parents of Eric Garner, Tamir Rice & John Crawford Endorse the George Floyd Justice in Policing Act

Washington, D.C. – Today, Gwen Carr, mother of Eric Garner; Samaria Rice, mother of Tamir Rice; and John Crawford, Jr., father of John Crawford III, released the following joint statement in support of the George Floyd Justice In Policing Act, legislation to hold police accountable, change the culture of law enforcement and build trust between law enforcement and our communities:

"The unjust killing of a loved one, especially at the hands of law enforcement, is a pain too many families have been forced to endure. We are proud to support this effort because it's the right thing to do. From banning chokeholds to eliminating no-knock warrants, this bill will hold officers accountable to the communities they serve and compel them to have a guardian mentality, not a warrior mentality. In the valiant pursuit of justice, this is a strong step in the right direction."

Biden is the clear choice when it comes to compassionate and decent leadership. In a battle of heart, mind, and character @JoeBiden wins by a landslide. We need to ensure that's reflected in the vote this November.

So what?
If true, that only proves metro D.C. residents lack any idea how those they lord it over struggle.

Ray Suarez @RaySuarezNews · 12m

That whole "lord it over" thing was hotly debated at the Constitutional Convention as a requirement for entering the Union as a state. Then again, 18.6% of DC residents live in poverty, on par with Mississippi and Louisiana.

Matt Maggio @MaggioMatt · 9m

D.C. visibly is ultimate 1% & 99%.
However, everyone outside that poor lives so much better off than those 75 miles or more away they rule that they lack any understanding of us.
They never work with, go to school with, go to college with, date let alone marry, us hicks.

Only some of their insurance is private, though notably it's propping up the 85% that's public. The rest is public but paid for with payroll taxes instead of income taxes, with value/service tiers similar to American-style commercial insurance, with some free plans a la Medicaid.

well I recommend the history of HIV criminalization, which has an abysmal track record, harms communities most vulnerable to infection, and exacerbates problems it seeks to solve. there are productive ways to promote mask use and curb transmission; policing isn't one of them

Criminalizing a disease and mandating mask use is pretty much opposite. But maybe the fact that black and brown communities are dying from the lack of mask wearing would also be something to consider.

Instant boycott.

What is wrong with people, particularly right-wing people? Are they against laws that mandate shoes, clothing, and seat belts, too?

Nice straw man. No one is asking for jailing. Seatbelt enforcement is done thru ticketing and fines. Same with masks. I guess the current state of affairs where mostly white people don't wear masks and mostly brown people die is a ok for you. Because we can't have new laws here.

We've learned a lot about federalism during this coronavirus. One critical lesson is we needed national leadership and a national plan. Particularly with a virus that doesn't limit itself to state borders. This is a central reason why the US is failing with the virus.

I think it's pretty progressive to stop a virus that is disproportionately killing Black and Brown people and that Black people support 2 to 1. I guess I don't think opposing mask mandates is progressive when you end up in the same position of GOP Governors.

Pretending I oppose efforts to contain the virus is BS. If you want to give police more power right now, I think you're wrong. Period. There are many ways of addressing a public health crisis, incl. encouraging mask use, that don't involve giving police more power. That's all.

The overwhelming desire by the NYTimes to make Trump's insanity normal through their false equivalence would make no sense if he wasn't working to make the press public enemy #1. As it is, it's like an act of self-hate. Or he lives in their heads.

Volunteering to wear a mask is not supporting a mandate. Florida has no mask mandate but Miami has passed one. Your position is De Santis is right and Miami is wrong. Mask volunteerism isn't working in Florida, people haven't worn them and the virus is ravaging out of control.

Imagine having no understanding of social change outside of "you can have the cops enforce it or you can vocally question whether there's even a point to the behavior"

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · 11m

This is a deflection. Please tell us how you're going to get everyone to wear a mask in Florida right now as the virus ravages with 9000 cases a day. The people who die are disproportionately Black and Brown. Mask volunteerism is why the virus is out of control.

Kate @KateDAdamo · 4m

You just presented two reductive options after using a misunderstanding of why people use seat belts and then presented two options. You don't mean deflection. So let's talk about two things - why aren't ppl wearing masks? Part of it is normalization. you pointed to places

Again you're deflecting. You oppose a mask mandate. What's your alternative. This isn't a hypothetical. The virus is killing people daily. Cases are exploding. Mask use saves lives. Volunteerism isn't working. What would you do?

Where they've been socially stigmatized. Not wearing a mask is being turned into a cultural value. If you look at places where masks are common (China, Japan) and the history of why they're common it was cultural, not carceral normalization that made the difference

Kate @KateDAdamo · 9m
Now let's talk about the other thing you just did, which is throw in a comment about about Black and brown folks as an excuse to justify expansion of the carceral system through protectionism - and in a state which ain't great towards Black/brown folks. You chose

Again, a mask mandate is the right position. Sending armed US police out to enforce it, knowing they're going to disproportionately target people of color with punitive enforcement and tickets is not. – at Newark Liberty International Airport (EWR)

Mask mandates can be enforced against businesses that don't comply or by the parking meter folks instead of police. They are just policed by somebody.

eg Texas. As Abbott reopened Texas he said "people should wear masks", because he did not have the courage to either mandate it or allow County Judges to mandate it. Now we are screwed.

Should Fauci quit? I waver but think about Colin Powell's 2003 Iraq War speech before UN. His endorsement sealed the deal; if he had publicly expressed his doubts, it might have changed war momentum. He hid his judgment; felt staying could help. That moment has come for Fauci.

Just 20 days ago @MayorGimenez foolishly said he'd re-open Miami-Dade's beaches.

In the last 3 days, Florida has reported 27,057 new coronavirus cases.

Now, the beaches are closing again.

The failure to contain coronavirus by @GovRonDeSanis & Gimenez is killing Floridians.

This failure belongs to @GovRonDeSantis and @MayorGimenez.

They insisted on a false & reckless choice between safety and re-opening. We all want to open our economy as fast as possible. Now, our businesses and families will suffer longer. This was preventable.

Is it too much to ask people to recognize that Biden has held press briefings and the media hasn't covered them? Certainly not live. The right place to send this complaint is to CNN and MSNBC.

my reference is to the pundits, the experts and models actually did a much better job

Why, it's almost as if there's a role for expertise.

To be honest, most of the annoyance/anger is about early flip flop on masks. There's nuance there, but people don't want to hear it.

thread above. If we're just talking about how my March 6th post could have been clearer, sure.

Nate Silver @NateSilver538 · 24m

I definitely never thought of you (or other mainstream US health experts) as advocating for a herd immunity strategy. But, early March was a confusing time! I think I mostly interpreted the consensus as "lock down now, and then figure out the medium-term plan later..."

6 1 16

Nate Silver @NateSilver538 · 21m

I think because there was so much consensus around the first step (lock down), it maybe concealed some disagreement about subsequent steps. Also, I'm not sure people had fully thought thru the next steps. So, I'm empathic and IMO the consensus on the first step was valuable.

Just to say, I understood Carl's position. And to be honest, I was surprised that many experts on here were not clearer that flattening the curve gave policy makers time to pursue containment strategies. Which most failed at probably Bc of insufficient consensus here & elsewhere

We require seatbelts, drivers' licenses, certificates of occupancy, ID to board a plane or cash a check, but requiring (or even recommending) a piece of cloth to prevent the spread of a deadly virus is TYRANNICAL DENIAL OF INDIVIDUAL FREEDOM? Gimme a freaking break.

New, alarming reporting by CNN's @CarlBernstein: Trump's handling of highly classified calls with foreign heads of state helped convince some senior US officials "that the President himself posed a danger to the national security of the United States."

There's an actual study of all the all the data that I cite below, but you pick 4 locations and ignore New York, Washington DC, Boston, cities throughout New Jersey. Pretty hackish.

J.D. Vance ✓ @JDVance1
Here's data from four different cities. Four different reopening regimes. Four different climates. They all curiously saw a big spike starting in early June. The confidence that protests haven't contributed to the spread of COVID is premature, and stupid. ...

What's odd about Dem primary political discourse is that we had elections around the country in 2018 in which candidates ran on unifying the country; appealing to Dems/GOP/Indies; and won. And then immediately after the election, the media/pundits just ignored all of them.

(((Harry Enten))) @ForecasterEnten
This is from the midterms and current polling... You can quibble with the exact numbers (i.e. there are margins of error)... but it's all pretty clear. Dem voters are olllllld... and they sure as heck ain't very liberal.

the only one who got tested. They weren't testing when my husband was sick. They didn't test my son when he was sick because he wasn't high risk. Up until now how we got sick has just been a suspicion.

We have long suspected that my husband got it because he still works in NYC & what they called his bronchitis when he went to Urgent Care in Feb because he almost passed out & couldn't breathe while at work was actually Covid & he unknowingly brought it home to us.

Not having concrete answers has been tough. Now we're two thirds of the way to getting there.

One thing weighing on me is I feel guilty for dismissing my son, who usually cries wolf, when he first said he was feeling sick. Also, our entire family unit could've been wiped out.

What do you think @neeratanden? It's totally ok to admit you were wrong. My whole family's in the US, I'm worried about them and I don't get any pleasure in the fact that the virus is spiraling out of control.

How would you explain Sweden's death rate vis a vis Europe if your position is that health care provider payment system is the determinative factor on the virus' impact? I believe the German health care system is the model for universal coverage and am a fan, but I don't think

Of course other policies matter! And Sweden made a very particular choice to aim for "herd immunity." But it's baffling to me that you would argue against low-cost, universal state-provided health care in the middle of a pandemic. Do you not think that would help in the US?

I think you perhaps missed the actual plan CAP has proposed for universal health care. Which I obviously support. It's here:

i think that's on the merits largely correct - it's not clear that access to healthcare per se is necessarily a major mortality determinant vs say a functioning public health system but as a Canadian idk why y'all trying to keep the existing system, m4a seems a lot better

If I could snap my fingers, I would move to the German model, which as I said is universal. Alas change is not easy in the American health care system.

If you think, that not worrying about being broke after laying down weeks in a hospital or just paying a lot for a basic test does have an effect, think again. And yes, we acted better than UK or Sweden, but our system has many MANY flaws

I think every American should have health insurance in a pandemic or out of it. And have always thought so. There are many ways to get there. I prefer Germany's system to single payer. It's simply false to say I haven't supported universal health care.

If I could snap my fingers, I would move to the German model, which as I said is universal. Alas change is not easy in the American health care system.

It's not that difficult:
- every citizen MUST be in any kind of health insurance
- when citizen is between or without job or doesn't want a private health care they are automatically in a statutory h.i.
- family members are automatically in the h.i. as the adult with a job

But I also understand what's really happening here. You took a shot at France (could've been another EU country) to settle a political debate against people who want to greatly expand healthcare access in the US. Now the data isn't on your side anymore and it's frustrating.

Nope.You misunderstood my point, which is what you conceded hours ago -health systems are not determinative of a country's virus outcomes. Instead of just admitting you misread my point, you keep arguing a straw man. I don't know why you can't admit you're wrong

I would argue that healthcare, free at the point of use, would influence a decision to seek medical care.

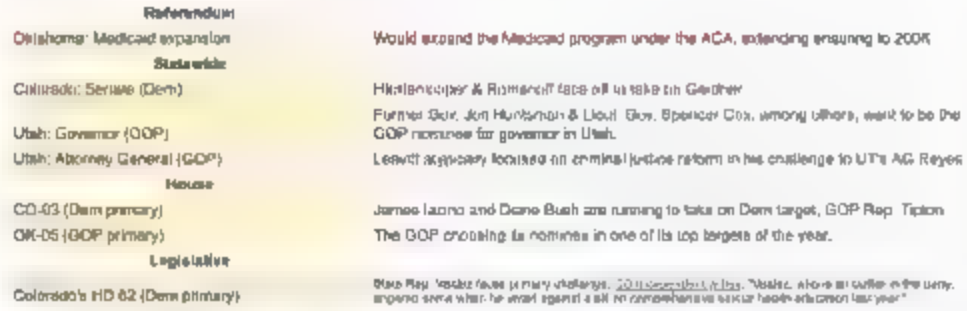
The 6 elections I have an eye on tonight, though I expect a few more things of interest will pop up. (docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d...)



Referendum
Oklahoma: Medicaid expansion	Would expand the Medicaid program under the ACA, extending ensuring to 200K
Statewide
Colorado: Senate (Dem)	Hickenlooper & Romanoff face off to take on Gardner
Utah: Governor (GOP)	Former Gov. Jon Huntsman & Lieut. Gov. Spencer Cox, among others, want to be the GOP nominee for governor in Utah.
Utah: Attorney General (GOP)	Leavitt appears focused on criminal justice reform in his challenge to UT's AG Reyes
House
CO-03 (Dem primary)	James Iacino and Diane Bush are running to take on Dem target, GOP Rep. Tipton
OK-05 (GOP primary)	The GOP crowding is nominee in one of its top targets of the year.
Legislative
Colorado's HD 62 (Dem primary)	Rep. Rep. Vaska faces primary challenge. [illegible]. Vaska, alone in office in the very, argued over what he voted against a bill to comprehensive sexual health education last year."

Either masks work or they don't. If you're requiring them because they stop the spread then reopen everything. If they don't work then the mandates are BS. Pick a narrative and stick to it.

Good to see @SpeakerPelosi speaking forcefully about Xi Jinping's disastrous betrayal of Hong Kong and breach of China's one-country-two-systems commitments.

10% of all voters approve of Trump's handling of the economy but disapprove of his handling of coronavirus. They disapprove of Trump overall by 75% to 25%. Trump's failure on COVID-19 defines him for Americans and drives their judgments of him.

For the large majority of voters, a declining unemployment rate will not mitigate their anger at a rising number of deaths. 65% will consider 200,000+ deaths a failure because it should not have been that bad. 56% already consider 120,000 deaths to be a failure.

Why is Trump moving quickly to open the economy? A majority of voters say it is because he thinks it will help him get reelected, not because he thinks it will be good for the average American.

Serious question. The positivity numbers may not be the same thing. Original testing was during a flu season, in hospitals where you test a lot of non-flu patients too. Now, fewer competing diseases, younger people, and more clinics set up for testing cough/cold. 🍎s. 🍊s???

In general that's a great thing to have, buy specifically EU governments have taken decisions the US has not. Comparatively, good leadership. Low bar to pass notwithstanding.

Cuomo railed Trump for not taking coronavirus seriously — refusing to wear a mask, holding rallies during the pandemic. "He has been denying the scientific facts since day one."

He said 35 states, many of which rushed to reopen, now have spikes in cases.

Are you sharing this because you agree with it? Because the idea that ending systemic racism is a status quo idea seems very ... off to me.

Samuel Moyn @samuelmoyn · 8h
No, Neera, but because the spectacle of the right thinking it is credible to treat class as a wedge issue against the left is revealing. How ■ that even possible to begin with?

David Atkins @DavidOAtkins · 2h
Because it's the oldest play in the fascist book. There is no amount of Democrats or Dem Socialists hyping M4A/GND that will stop rightwing fascists from pretending that rich liberals/jews are using POC and foreigners to keep down the white working man, & rubes believing it.

The best part is the vibrant discussion amongst some on the left of making common cause with the far right, which the far right responds to by ignoring class and calling the far left antifa. #winning

Most 21st century dictators survive not through terror and ideology but by manipulating information. They use low-key censorship and propaganda to boost their appeal. “Informational autocrats” do best where the educated elite is medium-sized and TV is mostly state-owned.

As a summer law clerk, the older white secretary just refused to do work for me. She happily did it for while male summer law clerks.

No way this is true. But it's unfalsifiable so Neera will stick to the story til the day she dies for intersectional clout.

Why are you denying that sexism and racism exist?

Soak the Rich @SoakRich · 22m

Doubting that a legal assistant literally refused to work with a (high caste) Indian woman because of her (light) skin color in this instance doesn't mean racism doesn't exist.

You are precisely why so many people of color think an exclusive focus on class will sell them out. Prime example. Because you will minimize racism when it conflict with your class analysis.

But that's not what you cite in New York. It's mask shaming from everyone wearing masks.

We don't have much evidence of your concern. Mask use is much higher in places where the authorities are telling people to wear masks and much lower where they are not.

Good question. I worry about it bc I really do believe it's causing fewer people to wear them when we really need them to, inside. I'm seeing it on my travels around country. Resentment over overbroad limits is undermining credibility for necessary limits.

As that reader put it: "Demanding mask use in low-risk situations destroys credibility and invites pushback from skeptics who could be convinced to wear one in a store, but not while walking dog on empty street." I'm seeing this all over the place.

Perhaps we should be clearer you don't need to wear a mask when you're outside social distancing but I also have a lot of experience with people not being able to measure that well. I have been outside with people getting very close to me without masks. So I'd err on other side.

100% this. I wear a mask when outside b/c I can't control how far people are away from me & it's easier than donning/doffing every time I feel someone gets too close.

It's just easier to leave it, & avoids awkward social interaction of "oh I'd better put on my mask on near you".

I live in NYC. I have attempted to wear a mask rationally. Walking down the street, ordering at restaurants, yes. Riding my bike, sitting on a blanket in the park, no. No one has chastised me. These whiners are outliers.

But that's not what you cite in New York. It's mask shaming from everyone wearing masks.

We don't have much evidence of your concern. Mask use is much higher in places where the authorities are telling people to wear masks and much lower where they are not.

I offered NY example only because the reader happened to offer it. I am much more worried about the effect of negative polarization in other states, where people who might be persuaded to wear masks when really needed choose not to bc of "wear always" edicts and usage elsewhere.

I recently listened to an excellent interview of Ta-Nehisi Coates by @ezraklein for his podcast and I can think of no better way to spend time on the Fourth of July than to listen to Coates' hopefulness. And the discussion of how we are struggle together for a more perfect union.

What is truly great about this Obama speech is how equates the protesters and dissenters for equality throughout our history who have made us a more perfect union with the soldiers who have saved the union in war. This idea is both beautiful and true. Great for the 4th of July.

Remember when @GovWhitmer refused to give in to Trump's demands to end to social distance restrictions in Michigan?

Michigan is now down to 250 new cases a day.

Meanwhile Florida is at around 8,000.

I'm bewildered that this is getting any serious attention. It's so ridiculous.

It's ridiculous that he can win, but he has a cult following just as Elon Musk does. Can Kanye pull votes via write in? Absolutely. I wouldn't toss this aside as nothing.

Unfortunately for Trump, Biden is not only not an advocate of progressive cancel culture, he is a survivor of progressive cancel culture. The whole failed anti-Biden primary strategy was to "resurface" long-known facts about Biden that are "now offensive" and cancel him.

> Annie Karni @anniekarni
> Campaign aides said they expect backlash against the progressive "cancel culture" movement to help Trump's standing w/suburban female voters frightened by images of chaos in the streets....

Remember when Biden was canceled for: Giving too many hugs? Some op-ed he wrote in 1982? Opposing a school busing policy (which attempted canceler Kamala Harris herself opposes)? Holding then-consensus views on crime policy in the '90s?

If Democratic voters were everything Republicans caricature them as (and everything some progressive activists would like them to be) Julian Castro would be the nominee.

The Democratic primary lasted a year and a lot of Americans paid attention to it. Biden was attacked for being moderate - unacceptably so by some - and that has branded him. So when Trump tries to make Biden antifa, it is just not going to work.

The Democratic primary lasted ■ year and a lot of Americans paid attention to it. Biden was attacked for being moderate - unacceptably so by some - and that has branded him. So when Trump tries to make Biden antifa, it is just not going to work.

Evan O'Connell @evanoconnell · 16m

Turning around and calling someone who's been generally liked for most of his career "sleepy" is pretty damn weak compared to re-igniting the hatred you've been stoking for years towards someone by painting the nastiest picture around

Davin Wood @DavinWood · 23m

"Sleepy-eyed" has been a Nazi and Neo-Nazi antisemitic slur, though, that Trump has used many times before (against Chuck Todd for one), so yes, it is sinister, although seemingly misplaced (which may be even more sinister).

The focus on whether Biden has made a gaffe or not downplays how easily he navigates these sorts of issues. He spent like eight minutes discussing statues at his Tuesday press conference, but he took the popular position (Wilson no, Washington si) and thus made no news.

By now every American should have access to N-95 quality masks. Every day that passes is a scandal & an epic failure of indifference of our government.

Details to come soon. Follow here if interested.

The Korean Central Government purchased 50% of the capacity of KN95 masks from 130-plus manufacturers.

2 86 563

Andy Slavitt @ @ASlavitt · 1h

They had the masks shipped to 23,000 pharmacies and set the price at $1.23 (1500 Korean won). Profit was limited to pennies per mask.

Masks were also distributed to ag co-ops & post offices to reach rural settings.

1 111 656

Andy Slavitt @ @ASlavitt · 1h

In March, Korea increased their purchases to 80% of domestic production to support the entire Korean population. The remaining 20% were directed to medical centers.

Reopening too soon is a problem. But even reopening when case counts are low will become a problem if there is no plan for how transmission will be controlled. Outbreaks must be actively managed.

We don't know who did this -- whether it's racists or anti-racists. But it's really stupid either way.

Just as taking down Grant's statue was really stupid. And if you want to hear about Grant more you can watch the History Channel documentary; Ta-Nahesi Coates is featured.

Second, on the theory that a largely unwavering 40% of the country likes the president, Trump would serve up policies and rhetoric to generate enough enthusiasm to turn out that slice of the country to vote.

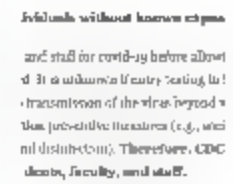
I'm flabbergasted by CDC's choice not to recommend entry testing at colleges and universities, because it hasn't been studied. Of course it hasn't: We have never before had students coming back to college while Covid circulated.

But everything we know supports entry testing.



Carl T. Bergstrom @CT_Bergstrom
This recommendation from @CDCgov, coupled with the rationale given, beggars belief.

This is thinest of absence-of-evidence arguments.

I believe that Trump gets that honor, currently in court now asking court to take a away healthcare from millions...and pre-existing condition coverage from everyone. I worked in insurance for 20 years (and a nurse 18). Without ACA, pre-existing exclusions comes back tomorrow!

It's not just the messaging that is bad. They are literally out spreading the virus around. Trump was here in Arizona two weeks ago for an indoor maskless rally, and Pence's visit last week left eight sick Secret Service agents from the advance team holed up in a hotel here.

Please don't give me any "Trump can exploit 'cancel culture' going too far" takes. Maybe another Republican could. But Trump is not trusted at all on these issues. And he's not really even trying to be strategic about them; he operates from his impulses.

I think you underestimate the number of people that are willing to hold their nose and vote for him despite disapproving of him personally. The "cancel culture" issue is a good one for him because it makes voting for Democrats less tolerable to those that are on the fence.

I am terrified. My health has been unstable recently and .y anxieties are at an all time high.

I am afraid of everything. Will I have enough food? Will I end up on a respirator?

Would anyone care if I died? I mean really care.

Silly, I know, but the fear is there.

It is humbling to have conversations with yourself about whether you are ready to die. I decided that I am definitely not ready, but then most probably aren't.

See, the slips into the morbid are frequent.

Phoenix's Mayor says she's been trying since April to get FEMA resources for testing, but she's been consistently rebuffed. In FEMA's latest response to the city, the agency actually told her it was "getting out of the testing business."

nytimes.com/2020/07/05/wor ...

In an interview later in the day, Ms. Gallego, a Democrat, said she had been trying since April to get more testing resources for Phoenix, both from FEMA and from the private sector. But testing, she says, remains woefully inadequate, especially for those who lack health insurance.

"We are the largest city not to have received this type of investment," Ms. Gallego said, noting that FEMA had set up testing sites in Houston, Los Angeles and elsewhere. "And you can see it in the increasing rate of positives."

An aide to the mayor said that FEMA had responded to the city's most recent request by saying the agency was "getting out of the testing business." Maricopa County officials were told the same thing when they asked FEMA for help, the mayor said.

Cases have doubled in Arizona in recent weeks; more than 3,400 new cases were announced Sunday. The state marked a record on Saturday with 3,182 confirmed and suspected virus hospitalizations.

Is it too much to ask people to recognize that Biden has held press briefings and the media hasn't covered them? Certainly not live. The right place to send this complaint is to CNN and MSNBC.

> Anil Dash @anildash
> It is rank incompetence on the part of @JoeBiden & his campaign that they aren't having daily COVID briefings with reliable information & trustworthy sources about how people can organize to drive local responses and help those in need. Leaders need to lead, period.

Phrases such as "racially charged" or "racially sensitive" should be dropped from journalists' lexicon. "Raising racial tensions" is devoid of meaning. Trump is saying racist things. It is part of decades of racist rhetoric. Let's not mince words.

Honestly, the fact that these numbers are still increasing in 6 months into this is both a catastrophe at a human level and global embarrassment.

This is on Trump. He pushed states to reopen. Those states that listened are seeing continual surges. The whole country suffers.

My favorite part of this discourse is for these folks, if a Dem or liberal strays at all from their orthodoxy, they must be shunned.

But for Trump voters, they turn themselves into pretzels to better understand the racism/sexism/islamophobia...you name it.

Hospitals considered the nation's "best," like the Mayo Clinic, avoid treating lower-income and minority patients who are dying disproportionately from COVID-19. That's the scandalous #1 takeaway from the Washington Monthly's latest issue.

The more hopeful #2 takeaway is that it doesn't have to be this way. We discovered a whole other category of high quality hospitals that don't screw the poor and people of color. We call them the real "Best Hospitals for America."

The positive rate is increasing amongst people who have taken tests. That means more tests is not why we are seeing more cases. I don't know why this is a hard concept for you or Trump. But if it's too hard a concept for you both, neither of you should be president.

Trump's politicization of public health is really destroying the credibility of the CDC. Who is going to trust this as representative of the science?

It's honestly kind of incredible how Biden set up his campaign to immunize against the "his antifa base will destroy our founders" attack. He couldn't have known that was coming, but this is literally in the first 20 seconds of his launch video.

Fair point but 1) Biden was VP for eight years and 2) the frontrunner for nearly all of the primary.

Another example I'd point to: Judicial Watch spent most of the Trump years suing for Hillary's emails and only now is suing for Biden's Senate records.

Where I differ a bit from the consensus is I think people maybe overestimate how easy it was ever going to be to develop & execute this strategy, especially in a large, polarized country like the US. A LOT of countries are having issues.* But we obviously haven't even come close.

Something that I think gets lost is: the plan was not supposed to be to have lockdowns—or related things like school closures—until a vaccine. Lockdowns suck. It was to use the time in lockdown to develop a more sustainable medium-term strategy.

If Trump loses the election & tries to cling to power, he'll need help.

But if key cabinet members try to help Trump, they'll risk criminal prosecution.

They should be asked NOW if they understand that.

"Would you support or oppose a policy that made it mandatory to wear masks in public places?"

Republicans support it, 53-42.
So do conservatives, 50-47.
So do whites, 68-28.
So do registered voters, 71-26.

Only one group opposes it: Trump voters, 54-42.

I'm with @nealkatyal. This is a bad day for Trump in the Supreme Court. Why do I say that? Because his arguments lost. We should be pushing Cy Vance to move very quickly.

Neera -Wear a Mask -Tanden @neeratanden · 10h

Katyal says Cy Vance can bring his case before the election. That's accountability.

They are going to a grand jury. Details wont be disclosed. There would have to be a criminal case brought. And god knows when it would go to trial. Without the detail being public there wont be any proof of wrongdoing. It will just be deemed another "liberal witch-hunt."...IMHO

New study suggests that sprinkling crushed calcium and silicate rock on farm soils could remove ~1 billion tons of CO2 from the air each year, at a cost of $80-$180/ton. Humans emitted 43 billion tons last year, so hardly a full solution, but maybe useful.

Incredible. Alberta, a Canadian province, gave away 20 million masks to Albertans in June at fast-food drive-thrus. Later this month they're giving away another 20 million. —

This is exactly right. The fundamental error has been leaving this to the states. The virus is not limited to state borders. We needed a national plan months ago. Other countries have fought the virus and won.

We have had 3 national plans

1) December 20-March 12. "Ignore it, it'll go away on its own."

2) March 12-April 16. "Let's do social distancing until Trump gets bored."

3) Since April 16: "Let it rip."

I gotta say, Gorsuch's opinion in McGirt is really striking and worth reading on its own, even if you've already read coverage about the case. supremecourt.gov/opinions/19pdf …

> in discerning the law's meaning and much potential for mischief. If anything, the persistent if unspoken message here seems to be that we should be taken by the "practical advantages" of ignoring the written law. How much easier it would be, after all, to let the State proceed as it has always assumed it might. But just imagine what it would mean to indulge that path. A State exercises jurisdiction over Native Americans with such persistence that the practice seems normal. Indian landowners lose their titles by fraud or otherwise in sufficient volume that no one remembers whose land it once was. All this continues for long enough that a reservation that was once beyond doubt becomes questionable, and then even farfetched. Sprinkle in a few predictions here, some contestable commentary there, and the job is done, a reservation is disestablished. None of these moves would be permitted in any other area of statutory interpretation, and there is no reason why they should be permitted here. That would be the rule of the strong, not the rule of law.

Let's be clear: this is part of the cover up.

Stone was an accomplice to Trump's collusion with Russia. But he didn't give up what he knew on Trump, knowing Trump would protect him. This pardon is therefore likely illegal as its intent is to obstruct justice.

Won't this mean that Stone will now lose his 5th amendment protection and will have to testify against Trump, when the NY State indictments are served?

It seems like this pardon will boomerang right back to Trump. It's why Nixon didn't pardon any of his flock.

So...on the same day the president was railing against C.D.C. guidelines on reopening schools, it turns out a special task force had compiled & circulated said guidance, along with best practices from across the country, that directly contradicted him.

It is just a damned shame in this country that a US Army LtCol who told the truth feels forced to resign while a political operative who lied to federal officials gets his sentence commuted. Truth, justice and the American way... not so much this week.

Ford pardoned Nixon (who had recently won re-election in a landslide) in part bc he did not think the American people could bear watching their president prosecuted in a criminal trial. That. Is. No. Longer. True. With. This. President.

Not that I would ever suspect Roger Stone of spinning, but I do wonder if his argument that he didn't want ■ pardon b/c that implied acceptance of guilt is bs, and Trump would only commute, not pardon. Was that the Barr compromise, maybe?

Is it possible that commutation was preferred to pardon because Stone retains his Fifth Amendment rights under a commutation if he were compelled testify/cooperate against Trump? Under a pardon, he would have to spill or risk jail again, right?

the part that really worries me is the numbers are where they are, and no cities or no states are locking down like we did in March.

Chicago still has indoor dining as an option along with bars being open.

We're not even trying to control it at this point.

At the present rate we can achieve herd immunity in three months; cost 200,000 lives. If there is herd immunity. Also, with the effectiveness of ramdesivir, if Trump had followed cdc guidelines most of the dead would be alive today.

After Dana Bash quotes the data and the science to Betsy DeVos, indicating the deadly danger to students, teachers, administrators and staff, DeVos simply dismisses those dangers and says "schools need to be open". DeVos doesn't care how many people die, including our children.

We have many anxieties about this election -but here's a new one - voter registration. With the virus, traditional voter registration drives have been hampered, and Dems are not doing as well as in past years. We all need to ensure everyone we know is registering.

Neera -Wear a Mask -Tanden @neeratanden · 4h

Please remind your whole network to register and ask them to remind their whole network, and so on. And with voter purges, it's vital people check to make sure they are still registered. Here's where to go: vote.gov

When I lost my mother unexpectedly, our last conversation loomed large in my grief. Six months in, we still don't have our act together so that people do not face death alone. So many have been denied that last chance for closure. My new, anguished piece.
theatlantic.com/health/archive …

> It's been six months since the world began battling COVID-19. Coronavirus cases are now surging across the Sun Belt, and hospitals are filling up again. Immediately, some reacted by restricting visitors. Many places had never lifted their restrictions in the first place. Those facing the worst moment of their life still aren't being treated as a priority.
> That dying alone has been normalized, as if it were a small matter, is frightening and inhuman. The panic of the early days of the crisis could be seen as a temporary, terrible compromise. Since then, though, airlines have been bailed out to the tune of many billions of dollars, while there has been no rush to build more negative-pressure rooms, designed to circulate air out, at hospitals, which would allow for much safer visits. We still haven't developed the infection-control protocols for visitors and built up supplies of personal protective equipment in ways that would avoid the need to completely isolate patients in the days and months ahead.

Is it too much to ask people to recognize that Biden has held press briefings and the media hasn't covered them? Certainly not live. The right place to send this complaint is to CNN and MSNBC.

Mum told me much later they heard on their wireless of what was happening to the Jewish people. So much suffering.

It turns out we were lucky that this virus hit in blue states first. They had the thinking to take action to stop the spread of the virus in their states. Imagine if it hit in Texas and Florida first. The whole country could be seeing their surges.

She accused her of voter suppression. You need to learn to read between the lines. She knows she was wrong. She wont admit it, but she knows it was wrong to tell people its safe to vote in person during a pandemic. Thats the implication...

Why is it so hard to hold these two views at the same time?

- Masks have a positive effect.
- Masks are not a gamechanger.

Actually they are a game changer. If everyone wears them we can get the infection rate down dramatically over time. Infection slows a lot when everyone wears a mask. That's why bars are such a problem. Can't wear a mask.

You only argue the direction of the effect, no contest there, not the magnitude. The claim in your initial tweet was that masks can turn the current development around. But realistically, they are part of a mix that can do that.

Neera -Wear a Mask -Tanden @neeratanden · 8s

Yes that's fair. If we want to stop the spread fastest we would close down more. But the things that are most problematic are things where people take masks off. Like bars and indoor dining.

The DNC didn't postpone the primaries or at least make them vote-by-mail only. What did you expect Bernie voters to do? Not vote? Bernie literally dropped out after that to avoid any more in-person voting.

It's still amazes me that Trump just repeats the fever dreams of Tucker Carlson.

Are there non insane people who believe Biden is going to abolish the suburbs? Honestly asking.

historical statues. And more.

"We could go on for days," he said at one point, and it sounded plausible.

At times, it was hard to understand what he meant. He seemed to suggest that his presumptive Democratic challenger, former Vice President Joseph R. Biden Jr., would get rid of windows if elected and later said that Mr. Biden would "abolish the suburbs." He complained that Mr. Biden had "gone so far right." (He meant left.)

Unlike the US, there was talk of the virus being "defeated" in Israel. Then, ALL schools reopened May 17th (experts advised a gradual reopening). Cases have since spiked to an all-time high. "middle-school children proved to be the most dangerous vectors."

I do not understand why this is surprising??!!! Every year schools are a breeding ground for the flu and common colds. Why would this be any different?

This is.....nothing??

Bubonic plague is actually common in rodents all over the world. Anyone who has ever gone camping in California has seen sings warning about it.

And if you get plague you just get streptomycin, a another common antibiotic, and then you're fine.

This is a great point and relates to an interesting article @neeratanden wrote comparing Biden to LBJ. LBJ was far from an ideological "progressive" but, after his 1964 mandate, enacted some of the most progressive domestic policies of the 20th century.

As Tanden points out in the article, an important factor was the massive mandate LBJ won in 1964. It was a wipe-out election. Let's repeat that in 2020.

Not addressing this one poll or the Q poll in general (sterling reputation) but in the coming months you should expect to see more variable results from RDD, non-voter file, non-online panel surveys than other surveys that use voter files or panels

Thank you for posting this - Grant's story is amazing - and some of the common misconceptions about him are quite wrong; he was not always drunk (not in Civil War, anyways), and he was not corrupt (mostly naive!).
Time to celebrate those who fought against slavery, not for it.

I just finished the documentary "Grant" in the History Channel, which was excellent. It's amazing how the pervasiveness of the South's racist Lost Cause narrative has erased one of America's greatest leaders. He literally saved the country.

Amazing American story: Grant, from a poor family, rises to be a great tactical general that defeats Lee, a patrician son of Virginia's elite families. Today, we have universities named after the defeated general defending slavery, not the victorious general defending the country

Grant's autobiography, for those who haven't read it, is an amazing piece of work. The level of detail in his post-facto reports, his humility and delicacy of expression, and his drive and motivation- bring the war years to life for me.

Thank you for posting this - Grant's story is amazing - and some of the common misconceptions about him are quite wrong; he was not always drunk (not in Civil War, anyways), and he was not corrupt (mostly naive!).
Time to celebrate those who fought against slavery, not for it.

Neera -Wear a Mask -Tanden @neeratanden · 3h

Exactly right - we should topple every statue of Lee and other confederate generals and replace them with statues of Lee, Sherman, Frederick Douglass and freed slaves.

We are facing daily record cases of the virus -- multiple records broken in a week. It's just insane that states with mass outbreaks aren't shutting down more. They are condemning people to sickness and death. It's heartbreaking.

From a small farm in Alabama, to life-risking service in the civil rights movement, to three decades in Congress, he was always “walking with the wind,” steered by a moral compass that told him when to make good trouble and when to heal troubled waters. Always true to his word, his faith, and his principles, John Lewis became the conscience of the nation.

Hillary and I loved John. We were blessed by his friendship, support, and wise counsel. We’ll miss him so much, but we’ll always be grateful to God for his long good life, and grateful that he lived to see a new generation of Americans take to the Simply put, Lewis was living history. An original Freedom Rider and a chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, he was foundational to the civil rights movement—a movement that remains as urgent today as ever.

John Lewis' leadership widened a path of opportunity for millions of Americans, and his courage challenged—and changed—our country.

In Congress, where he represented Atlanta for more than three decades, Lewis fought for racial justice, gun violence prevention, and global peace.

You sir, are perhaps the biggest impediment to restoring the Voting Rights Act, which John Lewis put his blood on that bridge for, and you have refused to allow HR1 onto the Senate floor, though it would make it easier for the next John Lewis to vote. Will you change that stance?

Do not utter a word about Cong. Lewis so long as you hold hostage HR4, the bill which passed the House in Dec that restores the Voting Rts Act. Mr Lewis fought for that law almost with his life in 1965 and then everyday to restore it after SCOTUS gutted the heart of it in 2013.

"We are made in the image of God, & then there is John Lewis," @JoeBiden and @DrBiden say, paying tribute to Lewis.

"We spoke to him a few days ago for the final time...He asked us to stay focused on the work left undone to heal this nation. He was himself – a man at peace..."

Statement by Vice President Joe Biden and Dr. Jill Biden on the Passing of Congressman John Lewis

We are made in the image of God, and then there is John Lewis.

How could someone in flesh and blood be so courageous, so full of hope and love in the face of so much hate, violence, and vengeance? Perhaps it was the spirit that found John a young boy in the Deep South dreaming of preaching the social gospel; the work ethic h share-cropper parents instilled in him and that stayed with him; the convictions of nonviolent civil disobedience he mastered from Dr. King and countless fearless leaders i the movement; or the abiding connection with the constituents of Georgia's 5th District loyally served for decades.

Or perhaps it was that he was truly a one-of-a-kind, a moral compass who always knew where to point us and which direction to march.

It is rare to meet and befriend our heroes. John was that hero for so many people of eve race and station, including us. He absorbed the worst of human nature's cruelty during t course of his life, and the only thing that could finally stop him was cancer. But he was n bitter. We spoke to him a few days ago for the final time. His voice still commanded resp and his laugh was still full of joy. Instead of answering our concerns for him, he asked about us. He asked us to stay focused on the work left undone to heal this nation. He wa himself – a man at peace, of dignity, grace and character.

John's life reminds us that the most powerful symbol of what it means to be an what we do with the time we have to make real the promise of our nation – that created equal and deserves to be treated equally. Through the beatings, the mass arrests, the debates on war, peace, and freedom, and the legislative fights for ju health care and the fundamental right to vote, he taught us that while the journ equality is not easy, we must be unafraid and never cower and never, ever give

That is the charge a great American and humble man of God has left us. For us, to answer their children's questions about what to make of the world we are le them about John Lewis. For the peaceful marchers for racial and economic just the world who are asking where we go from here, follow his lead. For his fellow govern by your conscience like he did, not for power or party. He was our guide history so we did not forget its pain and to our future so we never lose our hope

To John's son, John Miles, and to his family, friends, staff, and constituents, w our love and prayers. Thank you for sharing him with the nation and the world.

And to John, march on, dear friend. May God bless you. May you reunite with Lillian. And may you continue to inspire righteous good trouble down from the

John Lewis nearly died marching to pass Voting Rights Act in 1965

Now a bill to restore VRA has been sitting on Mitch McConnell's desk for 225 days

We can truly honor Lewis's life by protecting right to vote

I wrote this today through tears

Do not forget- John Lewis did not regard Donald Trump as the "legitimate President" and refused to attend his inauguration. “I think the Russians participated in helping this man get elected, and they helped destroy the candidacy of Hillary Clinton," he said then.

It's odd that pushing states to reopen - a decision that massively backfired - would make voters in these states less likely to vote for Trump.

Also interesting: voter dissatisfaction no higher than in 2012 (wish there was 2016 data for the same question!)

10. Are you satisfied with the presidential candidate choices, or do you think the presidential election ballot in November should include a "none of the above" option?

	Satisfied with choices	"None of the above" should be on the ballot	(Don't know)
12-15 Jul [redacted]	61%	33	6
13-15 May 12	60%	33	7

This isn't surprising, but it's pretty starkly illustrative

40. Do you personally know anyone who has or had coronavirus?

	Yes	No	(Don't know)

I have a message for folks - politics is about addition, not subtraction. Making your coalition larger is how to win. Winning big is important to take the Senate and to make real change.
Thought people got these basic facts after the last year, but apparently I need to repeat.

For me, it's not about the endorsement. It's about the stage. Kasich is an anti-choice republican. We can promote his endorsement (and we strategically should) without giving him our biggest stage where we legitimize him and thus his views. But, this is just my opinion.

You know, there was a way to avoid the primaries last week. Sanders could have dropped out. Biden is the plurality leader. Instead of doing that, Sanders campaigned -- and asked people to go to the polls for him. But I'm glad you're fixated on my question to the campaign.

Also, the Sanders campaign didn't "ask people to go vote for him." That was the Biden campaign and its chorus of cheerleaders, which ignored the CDC and turned out their vote. The Sanders campaign didn't run a GOTV operation because of the public health risks!

"It's not working". More like - Sweden saw a similar virus trajectory as other countries despite not locking down. This article makes it seem like Sweden is actively in the midst of Covid-19 when this is old news, they are past it just like other European counties!

This is not due to testing. The UK, for example, has done 198 tests per 1,000 residents. The US has done 148 per 1,000.

It's not due to population, either. The US has 4x as many people as Germany but 98x more cases. And Germany had the highest number of cases on the list.

WTF
this child for once "behaves" and all of a sudden people forget that 1 . he is trying to impose martial law
2 . he is trying to limit voting
3 . he caused the death of 140K+ people
4 . he just wished well to a person accused of sex trafficking

Holy back flips.

This 👉 "Senator Johnson...fully and repeatedly endorsed Vice President Biden's efforts to remove Viktor Shokin"

Biden Campaign's memo on #RonJohnson's sham investigation is devastatingly good. They have the receipts. 👇 documentcloud.org/documents/6999 ...

2. Senator Johnson himself repeatedly endorsed the firing of Viktor Shokin, including less than ■ year ago

Senator Johnson is arguably the most discredited individual in American government who could be involved with this farce - let alone "leading" it - because he fully and repeatedly endorsed Vice President Biden's efforts to remove Viktor Shokin from office, a sentiment he repeated less than one year ago.

In 2016, Johnson signed onto a bipartisan letter supporting the international effort to remove Shokin, in alignment with the U.S. government, the European Union, the International Monetary Fund, the Ukrainian anti-corruption community, and thousands of Ukrainian citizens protesting Shokin's corruption in the streets. Last October, Johnson reaffirmed his position, correctly stating, "The whole world, by the way, including the Ukrainian caucus, which I signed the letter, the whole world felt that this, that Shokin wasn't doing a [good] enough job. So we were saying hey you've ... got to rid yourself of corruption."

And yet, at the very same time that Donald Trump was on the path to impeachment for attempting to blackmail the Ukrainian government into spreading this conclusively disproven conspiracy theory for him, Senator Johnson executed one of the most ham-handed flip flops in recent memory.

This makes it impossible to believe that Senator Johnson is sincere. Because if he were, he would have to believe that he himself was in on this supposedly sordid worldwide scheme executed by Joe Biden. Maybe 2020 Ron Johnson should call 2016-2019 Ron Johnson as ■ witness?

With fascist-style Federal troops marching in major American cities, you'd think that the business community might wake up to the need to secure American democracy -- including things like paying good wages so that working folks aren't quite as subject to division.

This is what I find odd about Trump's ad strategy right now. He ■ forgetting he's actually the incumbent. Emphasizing "lawlessness" in cities just hurts him -- because it's Happening on His Watch. Really a self-own strategy.

He's a salesman. He doesn't get that products are good or bad.

If you care about products, after the sale there's accountability. To make the next sale, reelection, your product needs to have worked.

He just goes back to selling, as though he's unaccountable for what he sold.

I think this might be a knee-jerk reaction. I am NOT a fan of Bernie's groups, but I didn't see that when I saw the tweet. I think the wording is off (as someone mentioned to me), but it seems more progressive vs. moderate picks. Haven't other groups endorsed VP candidates too?

As a CA Bernie delegate, I don't claim any anti-shortlist effort. We can uplift our preferred candidates positively—that's why we did the Bass/Lee/Turner shortlist. An anti-shortlist pits Black women against each other and it doesn't sit right with me, even if I agree. (1/)

What a debacle. Over 70,000 new positive cases a day has become routine. Total incompetence that is killing Americans. We cannot become inured to this. At all.

Ummm what does this mean?

> In sharp contrast, the three progressives on Biden's short list stood up to the military industry and voted in harmony with the views of a strong majority of Americans. Those three were Senator Elizabeth Warren, Senator Tammy Baldwin and Representative Karen Bass.
> The progressive wing of the Democratic Party has the overwhelming support of Democrats on this issue -- and on many others as well, such as healthcare, environmental, economic and racial justice policies.

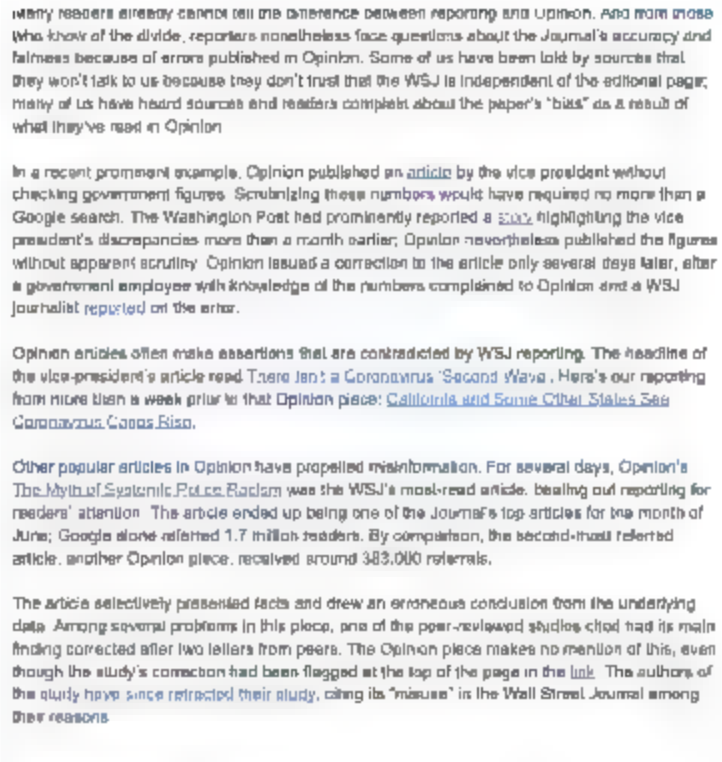
This week, The Wall Street Journal reported that nearly 300 WSJ staffers signed a letter to the publisher pointing out flaws and errors in Opinion articles and asking for changes. wsj.com/articles/wsj-j …

Below: The letter in full.



many readers already cannot tell the difference between reporting and Opinion. And more those who know of the divide, reporters nonetheless face questions about the Journal's accuracy and fairness because of errors published in Opinion. Some of us have been told by sources that they won't talk to us because they don't trust that the WSJ is independent of the editorial page; many of us have heard sources and readers complain about the paper's "bias" as a result of what they've read in Opinion.

In a recent prominent example, Opinion published an article by the vice president without checking government figures. Scrutinizing these numbers would have required no more than a Google search. The Washington Post had prominently reported a story highlighting the vice president's discrepancies more than a month earlier; Opinion nevertheless published the figures without apparent scrutiny. Opinion issued a correction to the article only several days later, after a government employee with knowledge of the numbers complained to Opinion and a WSJ journalist reported on the error.

Opinion articles often make assertions that are contradicted by WSJ reporting. The headline of the vice-president's article read There Isn't a Coronavirus 'Second Wave.' Here's our reporting from more than a week prior to that Opinion piece: California and Some Other States See Coronavirus Cases Rise.

Other popular articles in Opinion have propelled misinformation. For several days, Opinion's The Myth of Systemic Police Racism was the WSJ's most-read article, beating out reporting for readers' attention. The article ended up being one of the Journal's top articles for the month of June; Google alone referred 1.7 million readers. By comparison, the second-most referred article, another Opinion piece, received around 383,000 referrals.

The article selectively presented facts and drew an erroneous conclusion from the underlying data. Among several problems in this piece, one of the peer-reviewed studies cited had its main finding corrected after two letters from peers. The Opinion piece makes no mention of this, even though the study's correction had been flagged at the top of the page in the link. The authors of the study have since retracted their study, citing its "misuse" in the Wall Street Journal among their reasons.

Why was Ghislaine Maxwell at your wedding?

visited her in her New York apartment shortly before Christmas. She was dressed in a pair of jeans and a loose shirt, and she wasn't wearing any makeup. The floor was strewn with newspaper clippings about her father. Hundreds of letters of condolence lay on her desk, along with boxes of cards of acknowledgment waiting to be sent in reply.

I did not recognize in Ghislaine Maxwell the young woman her friends had described to me—the racy, glamorous social flibbertigibbet whom George Hamilton had escorted to the Ever Ready Derby in England

It's absolutely necessary that every American who has reached the voting age, or is of voting age registers for the election and this time really go to the poll or cast their vote by postal vote. Changes can only be made by voting. Therefore, be sure to take part in the election.

Schools in hot spots have an easy decision to stay closed. Schools in other areas have a harder decision. They do not want to become hot spots.

I hope everyone who supports @AOC's outstanding speech in response to Rep Yoho reflects on how they treat women on this hellsite. There's plenty of misogynistic hate-speech coming from all corners.

Absolutely. And I hope people (especially women) learn not to put up with any slight. And to handle slights with grace and strength. AOC dealt with it in the most powerful and effective manner there is. By calling attention to it, educating everyone and demanding better behavior.

While not every older, white, conservative man is misogynistic; the fact that a vast majority of those who hold, & have been empowered to express these beliefs, are white, older, conservative men is no coincidence.

Tiffany Elliott @TiffRichElliott · 20h

Neither is the fact that this demographic is where you find the loudest, frimest belief in white supremacy, as well. While humans are humans, & no ideology is innocent; there's something truly rotten in ultraconservatism today, & for past 60+ years.

McConnell, who is very efficient at appointing right-wing judges, says the stimulus deal may take 'weeks,'! This is a morally monstrous thing to do as well as being economically counter-productive, and I hope he'll pay a political price for it.
